ABSTRACT

This study aims to investigate the factors that influence Chinese students' decisions to choose President University in Indonesia as their preferred destination for higher education. The research focuses on exploring institutional, personal, and social factors that impact Chinese students' university choices. By understanding these factors, valuable insights can be gained into the decision-making process of Chinese students, enabling universities to develop effective strategies and policies to attract and cater to their needs and preferences.

To address this research gap, data was collected from 212 respondents through online admissions, and the collected data was analyzed using SPSS. The study examines the relationship between institutional characteristics, personal factors, social factors, and learning decisions of Chinese students. The findings provide evidence that institutional characteristics, various factors, and social factors significantly influence the learning decisions of Chinese students.

The results of this study contribute to the existing body of knowledge and provide a foundation for future research in this area. By validating the findings with previous studies, the degree of fit between the SPSS data analysis results and previous findings can be tested. These findings will help in enhancing the appeal and competitiveness of President University in the Chinese market and contribute to a better understanding of the factors influencing Chinese students' university choices.

Keywords: institutional Characteristics, Personal Factors, Social Factors, Intention to choose University.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First of all, I want to express my gratitude to the president university, for giving her blessing and guidance in writing this thesis. The completion of this thesis is inseparable from the guidance and support of various parties, therefore on this occasion, I would like to say thank you very much to:

1. My family, especially my father, my mom, and my sister.
2. My thesis advisor, Ms. Genoveva. I would like to thank you for her patience, guidance, and encouragement. Thank you for all the advice, support, and understanding for me. I really appreciate and glad to have her as my thesis adviser.
3. Lastly, I would like to thank you to everyone that took part and contributed to my personal growth, and development during my university life that I cannot mention one by one. Thank you for all your encouragement, advice, and feedback for a better development of myself.
