ABSTRACT

Cultural or racial discrimination exist, and hate crimes are encouraged by their distinct cultural traditions, physical attributes, and languages. The interviewees' accounts emphasized their encounters with hate crimes and their progression during the pandemic. These anecdotes allude to the persistent cultural and social fallacies that allow anti-Asian animosity to reappear on a regular basis. Respondents recalled racist occurrences they witnessed as children and how these incidents discouraged them from expressing their cultural heritage. Racism and hatred were not limited to infancy; people were subjected to racism and hatred in schools, colleges, and jobs. The Chinese American population is diverse in language, culture, and immigration history, which affects their experiences during the COVID-19 pandemic. Perhaps it feels more obvious to me simply because there are members of the immigrant community who are never able to make their professional degrees, but to be discriminated by physical difference that have also happened in the past where anti-Asia and anti-Chinese sentiment was born. Now that Chinese Americans have been the most valuable ethnicity in the country, they have shown their efforts to prove that they are not just a useless minority that would want to accept cultural discrimination through racism and racial stereotypes. Several movements and organizations have helped to spread the awareness of the racism and to rise the bravery to report the cases. Using historical reseach technique, information have been acquired from from secondary sources. Literature study is a process of searching for various study results or studies that will correlate with the research you are conducting. Literature studies method are also included to help varify the secondary data in pursuing the issues on the thesis.

ABSTRAK

Diskriminasi budaya atau ras, dan kejahatan rasial didorong oleh tradisi budaya, atribut fisik, dan bahasa mereka yang berbeda. Kisah para narasumber menekankan pertemuan mereka dengan kejahatan rasial dan perkembangan mereka selama pandemi. Anekdot-anekdot ini menyinggung kekeliruan budaya dan sosial yang terus-menerus menyebabkan permusuhan anti-Asia muncul kembali secara rutin. Para responden mengingat kejadian-kejadian rasis yang mereka saksikan semasa kanak-kanak dan bagaimana kejadian-kejadian tersebut membuat mereka enggan mengekspresikan warisan budaya mereka. Rasisme dan kebencian tidak hanya terjadi pada masa bayi; orang menjadi sasaran rasisme dan kebencian di sekolah, perguruan tinggi, dan pekerjaan. Populasi Amerika keturunan Asia memiliki keragaman dalam bahasa, budaya, dan sejarah imigrasi, yang memengaruhi pengalaman mereka selama pandemi COVID-19. Mungkin hal ini terasa lebih jelas bagi saya karena ada anggota komunitas imigran yang tidak pernah bisa mendapatkan gelar profesionalnya, namun didiskriminasi oleh perbedaan fisik yang juga terjadi di masa lalu di mana terdapat sentimen anti-Asia dan anti-Tiongkok. dilahirkan. Kini, ketika orang Cina-Amerika menjadi etnis paling berharga di negara ini, mereka telah menunjukkan upaya mereka untuk membuktikan bahwa mereka bukan sekadar minoritas tak berguna yang mau menerima diskriminasi budaya melalui rasisme dan stereotip rasial. Beberapa gerakan dan organisasi telah membantu menyebarkan kesadaran akan rasisme dan meningkatkan keberanian untuk melaporkan kasus tersebut. Dengan menggunakan teknik penelitian sejarah, informasi diperoleh dari sumber sekunder. Studi literatur merupakan suatu proses pencarian berbagai hasil kajian atau kajian yang akan berkorelasi dengan penelitian yang sedang dilakukan. Metode studi literatur juga disertakan untuk membantu memvariasikan data sekunder dalam menyelesaikan permasalahan tesis.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

A year of pursuing a dentistry program abroad ruined me as my health condition became unstable. I was about to continue what I left, then COVID-19 hit the world and immigration closed. The United Nations was all over the news, helping people in their own ways. Then suddenly I wanted to work with the WHO someday. "If I could not be a doctor, then at least I would be helping people in the health department," I said. And again, it was a temporary thought. However, I finally told myself to pursue what I was passionate about, which was "delivering opinions" or more like "talking". Completing this first degree has been the most crucial milestone that I have been dreaming of.

Throughout these past three years, my mighty God has proven to me that He would never fail me and that long before I was even born, He has prepared the best way for me to walk on. As I was preparing this research, I cannot thank God enough for His presence all along to keep me going. This is the day that God shows His mercy and grace on me despite the fear and discouragement I had on myself. He also gave me the best people I could ever ask for. My parents have become my front-liners going through this battle. In the middle of nowhere to be found, God sent them to take me out of the sea. I even conquered every assignment, project, examination, test, and even this thesis with the help of my "IR Girls" which has grown from friends to best friends. Well, there is one more person to be thankful for, Jonathan.

Finally, I would never skip to thank President University for giving me such an incredible journey. If it was not for the scholarship, it would not be on my top list. Then, the quality of academics that have shaped me today came from everyone working here. Starting with the security, janitors, staff, lecturers, Dr. Harryanto Aryodiguno, who always made it easier as I did a year of internship, and of course the honorable Head of Department, Dr. Muhammad A. S. Hikam, who happened to be my incredibly occupied thesis advisor, yet never left my chat on read. I will always appreciate every second you spent having the thesis consultation and my revision corrected. Your character did not just teach me academics, but manners and respect.
